Helping hands are only a wish away

Your wish is the command of a new company seeking to make the lives of Sutton people easier.

The ingenious firm will attend to errands – however small – for residents who feel there are not enough hours in the day and dream of a helping hand.

Your Wish is My Command offers a highly confidential service which is tailor-made for each client.

It has been lightening the load of people across the West Midlands since last autumn and is now expanding its services into Sutton.

"Today's lifestyles can be incredibly demanding and people do get very stressed as a result," says Nicky Lucas, who helped set up the company.

"You may be trying to look after the children, arrange some car maintenance, buy that special birthday present and ensure that you are fully prepared for an important meeting all at the same time – it's just not possible.

"We decided to create a way to take some of the pressure off people."

Working with a network of 'genies' or approved suppliers, the team finds someone who can carry out the request whether it be collecting clothes from the dry cleaners, a day spent waiting in at someone's home for tradesmen, or an ongoing service such as arranging a health or fitness activity once a week.

And flexible support with accounts and book keeping, administration, typing and data processing are all available, giving businesses peace of mind if they find themselves coming under pressure.

"It's a simple, but very effective idea," added Nicky.

"People need more time to focus on the important things in life and we can provide it.
